THE SONG OF ALL SONGS

Written and sung by Tony Pastor. Air: The Captain with his whiskers

Published by Chas. Maguire, 12 Frankfort St. N.Y.

As you've walked through the town, on a fine Summer's day,
The subject I've got, you have seen, I dar say;
Upon fences and railings, wherever you go,
You'll see the penny ballads sticking up, in a row;
The titles to read you may stand for a while,
And some are so odd, they will cause you to smile;
I noted them down as I read them along,
And I've put them together to make up my song.

There was "Abraham's Daughter" "Going out upon a spree,"
With "Old Uncle Sam" "In the Cottage by the sea,"
"If your foot is pretty, show it" "At Lannigan's Fall;"
And "Why did she leave him" "On the raging Canawl;"
There was "Bonnie Annie" with "A Jockey hat and feather,"
"I don't think much of you" "We were boys and girls together,"
"Do they think of me at home?" "I'll be free and easy still,"
"Give us back our old Commander" with "The Sword of Bunker Hill,"
"When this Cruel War is over," "No Irish need apply,"
"For, every thing is lovely, and the Goose hangs high,"
"The Young Gal from New-Jersey," "Oh! wilt thou be my bride?"
And "Oft in the Stilly Night" "We'll all take a Ride,"
"Let me kiss him for his Mother," "he's a Gay Young Gambolier;"
"I'm going to fight mit Sigel" and "De bully Lager-bier,"
"Hunkley Boy is Yankee Doodle," "When the Cannons loudly roar;"
"We are coming, Father Abraham, six hundred thousand more!"
"In the Days when I was hard up" with "My Mary Ann,"
"My Johnny was a Shoemaker," "Or Any other Man!"
"The Captain with his whiskers" and "Annie of the Vale,"
Along with "Old Pob Ridley," "A riding on a Rail!"
"Rock me to sleep, Mother," "Going round the Horn;"
"I'm not myself at all," "I'm a Bachelor forlorn,"
"Mother, is the Battle over?" "What are the men about?"
"How are you, Horace Greely?" "Does your Mother know you're out?"

"We won't go home till morning," with "The Bold Privateer"
"Annie Lisle" and "Zouave Johnny" "Riding in a Rail-road Kerr;"
"We are coming, Sister Mary," with "The Folks that put on Airs,"
"We are marching along" with "The Four-and-Thirty Stars,"
"On the other side of Jordan" "Don't fly your Kite too high!"
"Jenny's coming o'er the Green," to "Root, Hog or die!"
"Our Union's Starry Banner," "The Flag of Washington,"
Shall float victorious o'er the land, from Maine to Oregon!

Introduction

A fad in American life produced a shower of song sheets, slip ballads and poetical broadsides. Although such sheets had been printed by enterprising publishers for centuries, it was not until about 1850 that it became big small-business. Then, to meet a growing popular demand sheets, which had once been printed by the score, appeared by the thousands. They were run off in large editions, sold wholesale to dealers and sold retail by hawkers and in stationery shops and book stores. The peak of their popularity was reached during the Civil War the issues and events of which offered fertile seeds for the flowering of poetry, verse and doggerel. Gradually after the war, the rage for song sheets seems to have died down, although they did appear in plainer and cheaper form for years thereafter.

To some extent songs were expected to fill the emotional needs of people during times of tenseness: patriotic songs to march to, ballads of battle to boast of, sentimental songs to while away hours around campfires or bring tears to Victorian eyes, comic songs to fetch a laugh, bitter satirical songs to relieve feelings, and old favorites just because people liked, and still like, to sing them. As a result thousands of different song sheets were printed. Unlike sheet music designed for the singer or instrumentalist who could read the notes, song sheets were for the thousands to whom the tunes were familiar—one old tune covered a multitude of songs—but the words new.

As you've walked through the town, on a fine
Summer's day,
The subject I've got, you have seen, I dare say:
Upon fences and railings, wherever you go,
You'll see the penny-ballads sticking up, in a row:

so began another of those penny ballads ealled "Song of All Songs". The continuing verses give some idea of the ubiquity and variety of the song sheets.

There was "Abraham's Daughter"
"Going out upon a spree,"
With "Old Uncle Snow"
"In the Cottage by the sea."
"If your foot is pretty, show it"
"At Lannigan's Ball;"
And "Why did she leave him"
"On the raging Canawl?"
There was "Bonnie Annie"
with "A jockey hat and feather."
"I don't think much of you"
"We were boys and girls together."
"Do they think of me at home?"
"I'll be free and easy still."
"Give us back our old Commander"
with "The Sword of Bunker Hill."
"When this Cruel War is over,"
"No Irish need apply."
"For every thing is lovely,
and the Goose hangs high."
"The Young Gal from New-Jersey"
"Oh wilt thou be my bride?"
And "Off in the Stilly Night"
"We'll all take a Ride."
"Let me kiss him for his Mother,"

"He's a Gay Young Gambolier;"
"I'm going to fight mit Sigel"
and "De bully Lager-bier."
"Hunkey Boy is Yankee Doodle."
"When the Cannons loudly roar;"
"We are coming, Father Abraham, six hundred thousand more!"

And the songs poured out, if not six hundred thousand more, at least by the hundred score.

We have limited the scope of this catalogue to the peak years of variety, interest and popularity. Since very few of the sheets are dated, we have had to rely upon internal evidence and typographical appearance in order to keep our entries within the years 1850-70. We may inadvertently have slipped over the bounds on both ends, but the overwhelming number of sheets listed herein were produced during the three decades of turbulence, war and reconstruction. They are crammed with informal, self-revealing comments upon the political, military, social and economic life of the era. They are ephemera more pregnant with the essence of the times than most chronicles. Since these song sheets have been overlooked or neglected by all but a very few scholars and collectors, the Library Company has felt it important to present them to a wide public in a methodical catalogue. It is our hope that they will become known as illustrative of a whole generation of Americans a century ago. It is further our hope that they will call attention to the rich Civil War collection of the Library Company of Philadelphia.

The most active publishers of these ephemera seem to have been A. W. Auner and J. H. Johnson, of Philadelphia, J. Andrews, his successor H. De Marsan, Charles Magnus and J. Wrigley, of New York, and H. Partridge, of Boston. There were, of course, many others whose pieces are represented here. During the period covered, it would seem likely that some sheets were printed in most of the printing centers from New England to California. For instance, the productions of D. Kimball & Co. and G. W. Griffith, of Providence, only one of which is in this catalogue, are to be found in greater numbers at Brown University. Some local retailers, such as Astley of New Bedford and Boyd of San Francisco (who also published under his own name), stamped their imprints on pieces bought in lots from the main supplier.

The sheets flowed from the presses. Johnson may have been a pioneer in the large-scale printing of songs, for, in a broadside catalogue, issued a few years before the Civil War, he boasted: "My prices for songs are lower and my assortment is larger by Two Hundred Songs than any other Publisher." One of his later posters, patriotically overprinted on a colored flag, announced, "All the New and Popular Sentimental, Comic, Ethiopian, National and Naval Songs," over 600 different ones, and new ones being constantly printed. At Brown University there are sixteen bound volumes each containing a hundred sheets comprising the contents of successive lists (Nos. 1, 3-6, 8-18) published by Andrews and De Marsan. The latter reprinted hundreds of Andrew's songs changing only the border. Wrigley's twelfth list of "one hundred different kinds" took his serially numbered sheets up to 1,200.

Some of his gave double value, for Wrigley occasionally printed a song on both recto and verso.

Most of the songs—although poetical broadsides and slip ballads are included in this catalogue, they are few in proportion to the song-sheets—were issued on cheap paper within woodcut or type ornament borders. But firms such as James D. Gay, J. Magee and Wm. A. Stephens, of Philadelphia, G. P. Hardwick, of Washington, and Charles Magnus, particularly Magnus, put out sheets of far higher quality, printed on letter paper and almost invariably illustrated with a colored headpiece. Since the vignettes, battle scenes, portraits, views and other decorations are generally identical with those used on envelopes, illustrated song sheets have been brought a step out of limbo by the philatelic collectors of “patriotic covers”, notably George N. Malpass and Raymond Marsh. Malpass, in The Collectors Club Philatelist (Vol. XXXII), listed 211 different designs used by Magnus on 399 sheets.

We have found and illustrated 304 different designs. They include portraits of Lincoln, Washington and many Civil War generals, state seals (the possible permutations and combinations of state seals and different male and female figures are astronomical), flags, cannons and eagles, views of cities, maps and battle scenes.

We have discovered that many of the views and battle scenes, approximately three by five inches, printed as series, are actually overlapping parts of large panoramic plates. For instance, the twelve views of the Battle of Gettysburg can be put together to form a single scene, and this large print was actually issued by Magnus. The techniques of combinations of two elements (as a seal and a figure) and of parvum ex magno enabled Magnus to provide a great variety of headpieces. He advertised: “Civil War Illustrations (over 1,000 kinds) printed on Note Paper, as headings for Songs and on Envelopes [sic]. Evidence of the immense assortment will strike you at once, if you only look at the 100 different battle scenes, illustrating that one song “When this cruel war is over.” (There are only six of the hundred in this collection.) Malpass lists fourteen different headpieces for “Yankee Volunteer” and twelve for “Home Without a Mother,” more than half of them from the same series of camp views. We have noted a number of decorative pieces used many times and varied by comparatively slight changes in the plate.

The illustrations chosen by Magnus for his songs were frequently apt, sometimes merely colorful. “Wanted—a Substitute” displays a picket post at a Virginia farmhouse, “My Northern Boy to the War has gone” a scene from the Battle of Pittsburgh Landing, “Let Me Kiss Him for his Mother” a mother supporting her daughter and an angel holding a dying (or sleeping) soldier, “Marching Along” cavalry crossing the Rappahannock, “The Monitor and the Merrimack” quite appropriately the fight between the ironclads. Magnus’s battle scenes did yeomen service; an illustration, lithographed originally as part of the series of the first Battle of Bull Run, was used for the “Battle of Lookout Mountain” and “Battle of Gettysburg”.

While the ordinary sheets were inexpensive, the pictorial note paper songs were not. Johnson sold his plain ones for a penny retail, and wholesale “to dealers by the 1,000, 100 or Doz. as low as published in the United States.” Hardwick, whose songs were usually decorated only with stock patriotic cuts, advertised: “Soldiers can receive 14 of our beautifully illustrated Ballads, on receipt of 50 cents.” According to a frequently reprinted note of Magnus, ten of his sheets would be mailed to any address upon receipt of 50 cents, in other words, the price of a good cigar or glass of beer apiece. Magnus also issued them as pamphlets in accordion form in several series as “Six Military and Patriotic Illustrated Songs”. These are printed on light cardboard and the individual songs bear no imprint. We have not included these printings.

That the songsheets, particularly the illustrated ones, were collected at the time is evidenced by Gay’s advertisement on a special envelope to hold the sheets: “Illustrated Army Songs, Published expressly for the use of Soldiers of the Union Army. . . . Over 500 Beautiful and Popular songs, including Songs on all the great battles and different states, composed by Gay; Lithographed and Printed in good style, on double sheets of best quality note paper; . . . Price 5 Cents each. Persons getting up a collection should have the whole assortment.” It should be noted that Gay had an arrangement with Magnus whereby Gay was permitted to use the latter’s headpieces for his own songs. Henry De Marsan wrote in a letter of April 9, 1864 to John A. McAllister, Jr., an indefatigable contemporary collector of ephemera, to whom the Library Company owes most of its Civil War material: “I have published about 290 different Songs that have been produced since the present Civil war commenced; they are all of a patriotic character according to the two political parties & are connected with this War. I would not collect them and send them at less than 50 cts per hundred, freight or postage not included.” A bill from the Philadelphia stationery firm of Harbach & Bro., dated thirteen days later, shows that McAllister paid three dollars for “8 doz Union Songs”. On August 2, 1865 (after the war excitement was over), Geo. P. Hardwick told the collector that for seven dollars he would send “five hundred assorted songs including one hundred Sherman if you like.” The Library Company acquired the McAllister Civil War Scrapbooks in 1886.

So much has been written on the music and words of the better known songs of the period that it would be impertinent of me to attempt a survey in this preface. Those interested in the authors, composers, and histories of the songs I refer to Irwin Silber’s Songs of the Civil War, published by Columbia University Press in 1960. At the end of his work Mr. Silber has included an excellent bibliography which will lead the student on to even more specialized and detailed studies.

Something, however, should be said of the aspects of the songs not generally written about. The aesthetically superior and more widely sung verses have been discussed elsewhere. Yet, a somewhat different impression emerges from the literally thousands of song sheets: the picture of what was popular then (rather than what folk-singers have made popular today), the diversity of the subject matter and the sheer quantity of doggerel.

From the beginning of the twenty-year boom in song sheets, old favorites were in the majority, sweet songs like “Annie Laurie” and “Home Sweet Home”, patriotic songs like “Hail Columbia” and “The Star Spangled Banner”, sentimental songs like “Annie Lisle” and “What is Home Without a Mother”, and hundreds of others. In the 1850s songs of topical interest began to appear with greater frequency, swelling into a torrent of tears, blood and battles during the Civil War, and tapering off again thereafter. It was these jingles written for a moment in time which seem most fascinating today. They tell us more of the plain people, what they were interested in, how they dressed, what their pleasures were and why they were pained. They are, in a way, a social history of the times.

Historical events were reduced in the songs from heroic images to life-size. The steady flow of fortune-seekers to California in the decade after the discovery of gold was reflected in "The California Emigrant", "The Gold Digger's Lament", and "I'm Off to California". The success of Drake's gusher in 1859 and the subsequent oil booms and busts were given voice in "Pa has struck Ile", "Oil on the Brain", "Kole Oil Tommy" and "Striking Ile". The subjects of popular journalism were "immortalized" in songs. The famous case of the murder of the dentist Harvey Burdell and the suspicion cast upon his inamorata, who produced a heir said to be his, were celebrated in 1857 in "The Bellevue Baby Mrs. Cunningham Adopted" and "Mrs. Cunningham and the Baby". The same year another shocker "The Murdered Policeman, Eugene Anderson, who was shot by the Desperate Italian Burglar, Michael Cancemi" appeared in print. "The Killed by the Accident on the North Pennsylvania Rail Road" is a ballad of one of the nation's worst rail accidents, which took place on July 17, 1856, and "Sad Times" chronicled the burning of the steamboat New Jersey.

Contests of any kind were ripe subjects for the songster. Political campaigns received top billing. "Ninth Ward Song" was a 1856 paean in favor of Fremont. The "Republican Campaign Song" was used by the Lincolnites in 1860 and 1864; and "Rally for Breckenridge and Lane" and "Bell and Everett, and the Union" were sung by Old Abe's opposition in the earlier election. If songs had been ballots Lincoln would not have won a second term. A quick glance through the sheets would seem to indicate that for every one speaking well of Lincoln there were two which lauded McClellan more highly.

As a military figure, the general was given his share of poetical glory early in the war. "Give Us Back Our Old Commander" was the most frequently printed song about him:

Give us back our old Commander,
Little Mac, the people's pride;
Let the army and the nation
In their choice be satisfied;

Lincoln's great on Proclamations,
Stanton counsels Uncle Sam,
Halleck does as their adviser,
Generals: some - a perfect sham.

In the election of 1864 this song was revived and dozens more composed praising "Little Mac" and defaming "Honest Abe". One of the most vicious of the latter was "I am Fighting for the Nigger":

Three for Honest Abe,
he will be a great man yet,
Though he has loaded us with taxes,
and burdened us with debt;
He often tells us little jokes,
when pocketing our pelf,
And, at last, has made the nigger
the equal of himself.

There would seem to be little connection between elections and prize-fighting, but John C. Heenan, known in professional circles as "Benicia Boy", was such a link. As a result of his strong-arm work in elections, he won a sinecure in the customs service and a career in the ring. His fight with Sayers in England on April 17, 1860 was officially declared a draw, but had been, in fact, a victory for Heenan. The authors of "Ballad in Answer to Sayers, England's Pride", "The Fight for the Championship", and "Heenan the Champion of the World" claimed the victory vehemently. Other great fighters provided material for balladeers. "Rough and Tumble" told of the match between Poole and Morrissey; and "Bradley & Rankin's Prize Fight for 1,000 dollars a Side" celebrated the bruising day of August 1, 1857 at Port Albino, Canada.

Fires, firemen (each fire company seemed to have its song), and riots had their share as the subjects of sheets. The difficulties of the pre-civil War were echoed in such songs as "Specie, We have Missed You", a dirge on the depression of 1857, and "Paddy's Fight With the Know-Nothings", a record of the brief but violent upsurge of the nativist American party.

This brings us to a phenomenon, not sufficiently recognized, the tremendous influence of the Irish upon American songs and ballads during the period. For two decades before 1860 the immigration of Irishmen into the United States was of vast proportions. It was then that the huge Irish populations of the large Eastern cities came into being. "Paddy on the Canal" and "Mick upon the Railroad" express the prompt use made of the new reservoir of cheap labor. But, there were growing pains that a foreign-born group had to suffer in the process of assimilation into the American culture. The Irish were mocked by their enemies and praised by their friends. And the sweet body of Irish songs was added to the voice of the nation.

It has always been a popular legend that nobody loves a fight like an Irishman, and when the war broke out the Irish joined up by the thousands. It should be noted, too, that since most of them were still at a low economic level they could not buy out of the draft, as did many of the more affluent Americans. In fact, the Irish more frequently than others took the bounty offered by those seeking a substitute. In April, 1861, the 69th New York State Militia—the Fighting 69th, famous in many wars—was mustered into service, and went off to Arlington Heights to face the Confederates threatening Washington. A host of songs celebrating this and other Irish regiments began to appear.

One of the most celebrated and sung-about figures of the day was Colonel Michael Corcoran, the commander of the 69th. A true son of Erin, Corcoran, in the fall of 1860 refused to parade his regiment on the occasion of the visit of the Prince of Wales in New York. A court-martial was ordered, but the outbreak of hostilities saw the colonel off with his men to war. The 69th fought its first major battle at Bull Run as part of Sherman's brigade. It charged repeatedly, bravely, but in vain, against Jackson's line drawn up on the crest of a hill, and finally was drawn back. In the debacle which followed upon McClellan's retreat, Colonel Corcoran, wounded in the leg, was captured. He became the hero of "Col. Corcoran and the Prince of Wales," "Corcoran to His Regiment, Or 'I Would not Take Parole'", and a score of other ballads, only topping the stature of Captain Thomas F. Meagher of the Zouaves by a few verses.

It was Meagher who took the initiative to form the Irish Brigade when the Union Army was reformed after Bull Run, and thereafter the green regimental flags with the golden harp and the brigade insignia of a red shamrock appeared in battle after battle. This may seem like a long explanation of the appearance of so many Irish songs, but the preponderance of them seems to have been passed over by many commentators on the times. Heroic, comic and sentimental Irish songs were printed by the hundreds—"Banks of Sligo", "The Boys of Kilkenny," "The Colleen Bawn", "Jack Lannigan's Wake", "The Irish Volunteer", and no less than seventeen different ones with "Paddy" as the first word in the title.

Even during the war, however, the overtones of social prejudice were heard. The bitterness is obvious in the song "No Irish Need Apply".

I'm a dacint boy,
 just landed from the town of Ballyfad:
 I want a situation -
 yis, and want it mighty bad.
 I saw a place advertised -
 "It's the thing for me," says I.
 But the dirty spalpeen ended -
 "No Irish need apply."

.....

Ould Ireland on the battle-field
 a lasting fame has made;
 We all have heard of Meager's men,
 and Corcoran's brigade
 Though fools may flout and bigots rave,
 and fanatics may cry,
 Yet when they want good fighting men,
 the Irish may apply.

Amid the patriotic shouting the voice of satire frequently came through.

It may be that we get a clearer picture of the age from the satire than we do from the obvious heroics. All very well to encourage and uplift were the ballads, "How Sherman's Veterans Took Atlanta", "How Sherman Whipped Longstreet", General Grant's Victory at Chattanooga", "Monitor and Merrimack", and such. Many men were concerned about the draft and the obvious inequity by which one who could afford it could buy out. The violent draft riots expressed this feeling, and so did the song "The Draft is A Coming".

Every body's feeling berry lonesome:
 For, dey spec' de draft to cum;
 For, when de draft goes in operation,
 Dey'll call on ebery one;
 But rec'lect some had t'ree hundred,
 An' those dat hab got to do de fighting,
 Are de poor dat hab to go.

It seems strange in a day when draft evasion is looked on as contemptible to look back a century to the Civil War and realize that it was acceptable according to the mores of the 1860s.

To be sure there was humor too. Frequent parodies were the laughing reverse of a weepy sentimental coin, characteristic of which was "Put My Little Shoes Away". "Mickey's Dead-Broke at the Door" made mild fun of "Brother's Fainting at the Door". Drinking songs were common, and liquor and the free-handed drinking thereof were subjects for laughter. "Don't Mix Your Liquor, Boys but Always Take it Neat" and "Whiskey, Your a Villyan" were typical. The number of Irish dialect songs, as noted, was legion. There were also some which reflected the German immigration, up to then second in size only to the Irish, such as "Johnny Schmoker", "Der Deitcher's Dog", and "Hans Dunder has Gone for a Soldier."

As now, even during the Civil War "high style" evoked mirth. There were the "Red Petticoat" and fancy bonnets in "New Other Side of Jordan," an innovation in "My Gum A-Rubber Boots", and great trailing bustles in "The Original Water-Fall". "My Moustache is Growing" laughed at the teenagers of the 1860s. The singers, many of them the popular Ethiopian minstrels, sang their ditties to tremendous applause—it was usually so phrased—in the most famous music halls of the day. Whatever was new, popular, or happened to strike the public fancy was the subject of a song, a "Visit to Barnum's Museum", the "Tax-Bill", or, as featured in Uncle Tom's Cabin, "Oh, I'se So Wicked". For those who find it difficult to believe that there's nothing new under the sun we cite a things-aren't-what-they-used-to-be verse from "Our Grandfathers Days":

The gals didn't paint,
 stuff themselves up with cotton,
 They didn't wear hoops, patent bustles or stays,
 Didn't smoke cigarettes,
 or drink cocktails at Taylor's;
 That wasn't the style in our grandfathers' days.

If the war itself seems to be passed over somewhat cursorily in these prefatory remarks, it is because this aspect of song and balladry has been so thoroughly commented on by others. Yet, since we did mention Corcoran and Meagher, we should note the effusion of patriotic sentiment which resounded through the North upon the death of the gallant, young, colorful, Colonel Ellsworth. When Ellsworth's company of Zouaves occupied Alexandria on May 24, 1861, the commander saw the Confederate flag flying over the Marshall House. He entered the building, tore down the flag, and, coming down the stairs, was shot by the proprietor of the hotel. He became the first "martyr" of the Union cause. "Ellsworth Requiem", "Ellsworth's Avengers", "Death of Col. Elmer E. Ellsworth," "Ellsworth's Body Lies Mouldering", and "Columbia Mourns for Ellsworth" were some of the sheets which memorialized his death. Four years later there were no more dashing young volunteers in red and blue uniforms. It was a long, hard, and sad war. The final burst of song told of Sherman's march to the sea, the assassination of Lincoln, the capture of Jeff Davis and "When Johnny Comes Marching Home".

This rather long dissertation on songs published in the North is not meant to imply that there were no Southern songs. There were, but the Confederacy did not have the printing houses, the paper or the publishers the Union had. "Maryland, My Maryland", "The Bonnie Blue Flag", and, of course, "Dixie" were on thousands of Southern lips throughout the war. And there was a generous exchange of songs, with words changed to match the allegiance of the singers. Northern parodies of Southern songs and vice versa were common.

Most of the Confederate songs were issued without any imprint and without the benefit of the commercial appeals made by Gay, Johnson, Magnus and Wrigley. A great many seem to have been issued clandestinely in Baltimore where, if not the majority, a large minority favored the rebellion. As a result, the largest collection of such songs is to be found at Evergreen House of Johns Hopkins University, a collection made contemporaneously by one of the members of the Garrett family. Other Southern sheets came off presses in cities like Richmond, and one in this collection, composed at a camp near Manassas, July 5, 1861, has the pencil note, "Printed in Lee's Army".

Flag-waving, high courage, God and country figured prominently in most of them. "God and Liberty" is typical:

In the name of God! Amen!
 Stand for our Southern rights;
 On your side Southern men,
 The God of battles fights!

In the South, the invaded country, there were fewer expressions of humor. The war was grim. The Yankee was the aggressor, the tyrant. These feelings show in every line of "It is I":

They come, they come, - a motley crew,
 For rapine, rape and plunder met;
 From different realms of every hue,
 The olive, yellow, white and jet;

The princely loom-lord and his servile loot,
By sea and land they come - on horse, on foot

Lincoln was mocked and execrated, as in "Lincoln on a Rail" and "Lines on the Proclamation Issued by the Tyrant Lincoln". Lee, Johnston and Beauregard, particularly the last who seemed to hold the hopes of the Confederacy in the earliest year of the war, were praised to the skies. The dead were mourned; the victories celebrated, as the first Battle of Bull Run:

We had a little fun,
at the Battle of Bull Run
Where the Yankees left the battle-field a sailing,
Where acres of them fell,
for we gave them merry ----
And sent them to the happy Land of Canaan.

Let us end on a happy note, for during all the bitterness happy songs were sung, too. Many delightful folk songs found their way into print through the medium of song sheets. "Nancy Till", "O Dearest Dine", and "Swash Shay, Hands Across" were some of them. Dan Emmett, the author of "Dixie", was responsible for the minstrel song "High Daddy":

The sun's gone down to take a little sleep,
I met High Daddy in the morning;
The moon's come out to take another peep;
I met High Daddy and I wont go home any more,
any more.

And, there is an overtone of beatnik jargon in "Clap Your Hands Till Daddy Comes Home":

The fattest baby I every saw
Was a baby that come from Arkansas.
'Twas as fat and black as a Thomas cat,
Crying for his Daddy O.

METHOD

The difficulty in compiling this catalogue was in keeping the descriptions short, yet sufficiently detailed to permit easy identification. Since no similar material has been catalogued in print before, we have had to evolve our own method, which we are fully aware will not satisfy the most meticulous, but which hopefully will be adequate for the great majority of its users. The entries do not give full bibliographical details. We have used abbreviations and certain short-cuts. This is a brief catalogue of the collection in the possession of the Library Company of Philadelphia, which we do, however, believe is as large a collection of such material as exists today.

A typical entry consists of 1) title; 2) first line; 3) number of verses; 4) air to which sung; 5) abbreviated information given in sub-title, heading or elsewhere on sheet; 6) ornament and/or illustration; 7) trim size. Variant titles are noted under the main entry with cross-references to that entry. Where more than one song appears on a sheet, the second song has a cross-reference. The information concerning author, singer, composer and publisher of the music, copyright and advertisements has been cut down to the essentials for identification. No publisher's address has been included in the text, but an index of publishers with their variant addresses, keyed to the text by numbers, appears at the end. Type ornament borders, except where two different ones for an otherwise similar sheet require more detail, are merely noted as such. The woodcut or type-metal borders of De Marsan and Wrigley have been given identifying names and are illustrated. The Magnus headpieces have been given numbers and are keyed to the illustrations. The size is the trim size of the Library Company copy. The Confederate songs are at the end with a separate alphabet of their own.

The following abbreviations have been used:

A-J - Auner and Johnson
adv. - advertisement

cm. - centimeter
col. - colored
cop. - copyright
hdpc. - headpiece
publ. - publisher
t.o. - type ornament
vs. - verse

That some errors will have crept into the text in the course of the original description and subsequent typings, in spite of the careful checking, we accept as inevitable. We hope they will be noticed with charity and reported to us.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

In compiling the catalogue we received help from many sources. James J. Heslin and the staff of the New-York Historical Society were extremely generous of their time. They reorganized their entire collection of song sheets in order to exchange duplicates with us. William A. Jackson and the staff of the Houghton Library at Harvard showed us great courtesy by making available their collection to us. They, too, exchanged duplicates with the Library Company. We were also able to increase our holdings by exchange with Providence Public Library, through the kindness of Stuart C. Sherman, and the Garrett Collection at Evergreen House, through the kindness of Elizabeth Baer, and with the collectors, Lester A. Levy of Baltimore, and Seymour Moss of Philadelphia. We were permitted to examine the collection of Brown University, which is probably of a size comparable with that of the Library Company, and the smaller collection of the Free Library of Philadelphia. Harry M. Buten of Merion, a collector of Magnus, introduced us to the philatelic literature on that publisher. And Manuel Kean of Kean Archives, who took the photographs for the illustrations in this book, was helpful in a dozen different ways with the project, and was always enthusiastic about it.

Much of the initial work on the song sheets was done by Elizabeth Ingerman, now at Winterthur Museum, who first became excited by them and began work on their arrangement, classification and description. In successive stages, Gisela Matteson, Mary Lou Jones and Carol Elias did the thankless chores of rearranging, revising and finally typing the manuscript. Throughout, Barney Chesnick, the Curator of the Library Company, and Lillian Tonkin provided great assistance to all of us who were working directly with the mass of material herein described. Finally, the Library Company is particularly grateful to Philip D. Sang of Chicago through whose imaginative generosity a portion of the cost of publication was underwritten.
